

While some of us may find ourselves comfortable and secured with our wealth and positions, posterity shall definitely condemn us for having remained happy by only cursing the poor helpless people who have made us what we are today, at a time when we were able to do so much to change our destiny for the better.

Bangladesh has been born at the altar of blood given by millions of people. It has therefore come to stay. Its future shape shall however depend on our honest desire and ability to transform her into a strong, prosperous and model country of the future. Let us therefore join all our hands in giving her the shape that she deserves.

Dream

Elma Jashim Niha

When I was four years old and a preschooler,
I wanted to be a princess.

Now I am five years old and a kindergartener,
So, now I don't want to be a princess.

I want to be a doctor instead
and this is my dream,
I know this is hard to make true.

I am studying with care,
following teacher's directions with caution,
and asking good wishes from my Mom and Dad.
I know, all these would bring my dream to true.
